Newsletter Volume 18, November 2025

A note from the Editor - by Christiane Menelas

Hello my friends,

I'm writing this months newsletter from the frozen tundra aka Alaska. It's a very nice change from the heat and drought in Texas, so no complaints from me. The aurora has been very busy, but the problem is getting clear skies at the same time it decides to make an appearance. I have witnessed the first snowfall already, so it's very tricky to catch a glimpse. But I'm not a quitter - still have a good chance on Nov. 8/9th - fingers crossed for clear skies!

This month starts the beginning of the holiday season. Thanksgiving will be here before we know it, and then it will be time for our annual Christmas Party! Don't forget to work on decorating your Christmas ties! It works the same way as an ugly Christmas sweater, but it's not as hot to wear all night - can't wait to see what everyone comes up with!

As promised we will feature Barbara Beversdorf this month with her excursion to Alaska, and a stop in San Fransisco along the way.

We also have a new feature, thanks to our club member Suzanne (Suki) Daunt, who wants to highlight a member that volunteers their time and talent for the club each month. We are starting out with the one and only Taryn Bradley. I know you will enjoy a behind the scenes look into Taryn's fun, and busy life. Please consider submitting your own story about a club member you would like to highlight for us!! Everyones participation in the newsletter is welcomed and encouraged.

Happy clicking

Barbara Beversdorf

This trip was several months in the making. My goal was to balance time with friends and family AND my love for photography. Research was done and plans made..... all very subject to change.

We flew into San Francisco 2 days early with a list of all the things we wanted to see. We navigated with our feet and uber and never felt unsafe, always in pairs or groups. From the history of Alcatraz to the loud barks of the harbor seals on pier 39, it was time well spent.

SAN FRANCISCO

In Skagway, a bus ride into the Yukon of Canada took us to the small town of Carcross where we boarded the White Pass Train back down. Of course, there was another history lesson as the bus and train took the same route that prospectors took during the Klondike Gold Rush.

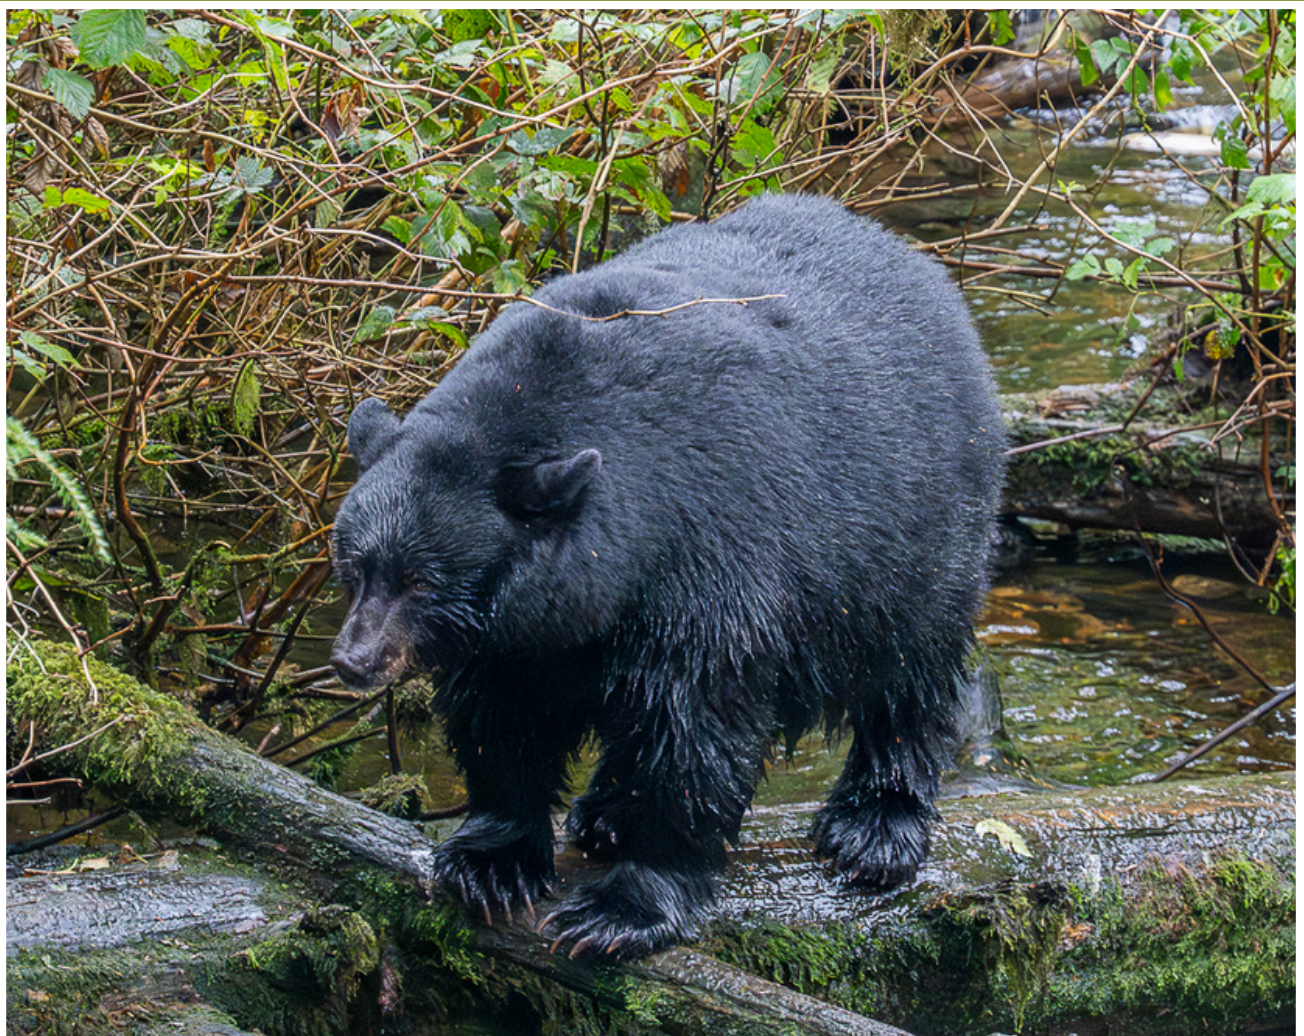

We boarded a smaller boat in Endicott Arm Fjord that took us up close and personal to Dawes Glacier where we experienced several episodes of the glacier calving. We spotted wildlife high up in the mountains and sailed close to waterfalls created by melting glaciers.

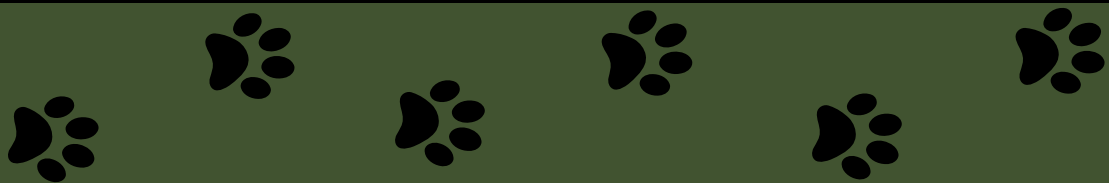

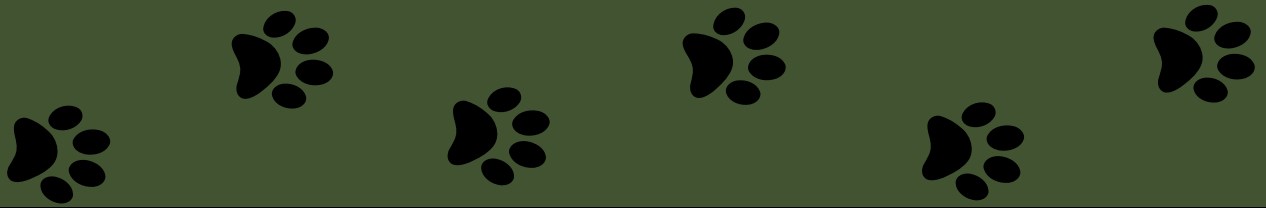

My to do list of things to see was bears. I saw bears!!! A bus ride in Ketchikan up into the rainforest took us to Totem Park and the Wildlife Sanctuary. Here, I used my 100-400mm lens. Wildlife of course was not guaranteed.....so we were blessed to see so many bears. Another history lesson was given as we witnessed a real totem being carved.

I didn't see any whales or eagles up close, nor did I see the northern lights. My plans to change lenses for better photos were abandoned in the wet misty weather. But, my trusty cell phone captured so many beautiful memories. We missed a port due to a medical evacuation by the coast guard, but the heart attack victim survived and that's what matters.

Cruising isn't for everyone, but everyone should experience Alaska in this lifetime. Maybe a land based trip to Alaska is on the horizon.

THIS is Taryn

(by Suzanne Daunt)

Many of you know Taryn as that sweet face in front of the laptop who manages the many slides that go into each Club meeting. But did you know that she also maintains the Facebook page, Instagram, responds to Club emails, accepts Club photos (and graciously reformats them for PSA evaluation), maintains the Club voting platform, and she has a full-time job outside of the Club?

This past year Taryn has single-handedly updated our website into an on-line platform that is not only user friendly, but esthetically appealing. While she possesses many techno-savvy skills, she humbly considers herself an artist who seeks to add creative style to the Club's internet appearance.

Like many of us, Taryn began her photography journey in High School where she worked on the yearbook and did web design. In the early years she worked with a Rolleiflex medium format camera and a Canon AE-1. Taryn studied Communications and Advertising at Angelo State University and completed a Fine Arts degree specializing in Photography at Texas State University. Interestingly, the University program still teaches film processing and developing prints in a darkroom – ah, just like the good old days!

Taryn worked in social media management where she honed her skills as a commercial photographer. She has also undertaken the stressful job of shooting weddings, both as an assistant and primary photographer. Currently, Taryn shoots with a Fujifilm Xt4 and various prime lenses. She prefers the compactness of the Fujifilm as it allows her to shoot documentary and street photography without being obtrusive. Taryn uses Lightroom as her primary editing tool but will dive into Photoshop if needed.

Like many of us, her editing skills were picked up by viewing the many posts on "University of YouTube." Fujifilm photo tip: an app can be obtained that provides camera settings for it's DSLR's that mirror the punchy color impact that the film cameras were known for. Who knew?!

Taryn likes all aspects of the photo process - planning the shot, doing the actual shooting, and editing the photos so that her unique brand is captured in every image. She loves chasing the light, looking for unusual shapes, old signage, rust, and being pleasantly surprised at a beautifully captured sunset. She is learning to be more intentional about her shots and the lighting. It might be a great shot, but not at high noon. Returning to a location when the light is optimal is an option worth considering. Although Taryn has photographed many portraits, she wants to expand her knowledge in posing individuals, arranging groups, and learning how to tactfully reposition people. Although she acquired some of these skills through classes offered by Precision Camera, there is always room to grow.

In her “free time” Taryn runs her business, www.tarynblissphotography.com which promotes family portraits, head shots, commercial/product photography, as well as print sales. Her advice for anyone considering a business is just do it! Her moto is: if it’s something you like, there are probably other people in the world who will like it too. We all pursued photography for differing reasons. Taryn’s love for photography comes from a desire to create a document that you can look back on and cherish a time shared with family and friends. She seeks to capture these moments in her images.

Food for thought: What is your brand? What drove you to photography and what do you want to learn?

The GNBPC has many talented photographers who volunteer their time and talent shooting various events in the community or are involved in Club business.

In the coming months different individuals will be showcased in the Newsletter with the hope that others will be inspired to volunteer for shooting and/or teaching opportunities.

P.S. Anybody can write an article on a fellow Club-member, with their permission of course. Please consider avenues for volunteering your time or writing an article on a Club member.
